Disclosures

J.P. Morgan collects fees from holders of depository receipts. JPMorgan may (i) reimburse the issuer for certain expenses incurred by the issuer in connection with the depository receipts program or (ii) share with the issuer revenue derived by JPMorgan from the program. JPMorgan may use brokers, dealers or other service providers that are affiliates or other divisions of JPMorgan and may earn or share fees and commissions. From time to time, J.P. Morgan may pay a rebate to brokers in connection with the deposit of shares for the issuance of unsponsored depository receipts. J.P. Morgan disclaims all liability arising out of, or relating to, such rebates. In particular, J.P. Morgan disclaims all responsibility regarding whether such broker passes all or a portion of such rebate to beneficial holders of such depository receipts.
